“ I'll always remember when Uncle Jack would be sitting in his recliner telling a story about some past event and I would look over at her in her recliner at some point where there might be an exagerration and she would roll her eyes upward. She would not not have to say a word to express that what Uncle Jack was relating was not exactly as it had happened. I also enjoyed how she was able to adopt the right tone of voice when dealing with my father who could be dificult at times. He would listen to her. Rusty
