“ Cindy and family, our hearts are so heavy with the news of Ed's passing. He was such a terrific guy! Honest, helpful, generous, interested and interesting, funny, light-hearted, wicked smart and wonderful. Our world has just lost a valuable and much loved individual, and we are so sad to have lost such a great friend. Please know that we are thinking of you, and will always be here for you.

“ Ed had a joke for every occasion! In addition to his sense of humor was his ability to cook! And more importantly...serve. He loved to whip up his farm fresh eggs and blueberry pancakes on Sunday mornings. Ed's style was to announce the next meal before the current one was finished. “Yeah, tonight I'll make pizza” was a common morning phrase. Actually, I believe this was his daily phrase. We'd barely be finishing our last mouthful of maple syrup laden pancakes and out would come the pizza pans. Ed had his routines, pizza making was a big part. We'll miss those wire rimmed glasses he refused to part with and the camo iPhone case clipped to his belt. Ed had an individual style that's for sure: New Balance sneakers, white socks, Lee jeans with a tee and a hat. Always a hat. In a world of gluten free-organic vegan-latest tech, politically correct and fashion trends...Ed wore what wanted, said what he thought and ate/drank what he loved. Here's to Ed, the man and now the legend. Xoxo Sandy

“ *I had the pleasure to be teamed up with Eddie on several jobs over the years. We always laughed no matter how tough the job was. I remember working at IBM where we had to vacuum up at the end of the day. I was vacuuming and Eddie was pushing the canister behind me when all of a sudden the wand had stopped picking up the debris so I started to smack it on the ground several times and call it a few choice words. All of a sudden I turn around and there's Eddie with the hose in his hand as he had pulled it out of the canister. We both were laughing! That's the kind of guy he was, besides being one of the smartest electricians that I knew. Eddie would also tell jokes all day long, just about every day without repeats. He was a great guy and a great friend. I will miss him!! You will always be in my heart Eddie!

“ Always a great guy to work with. He cracked me up on an electrical part that he had a name for. The part would change from EMT to Mc Cable. Ed called "come to" come from EMT to MC. The trade called it EMT to MC "change over".

I had to ask ED several times what he was talking about. The I knew Babcock language as Ed saw it.
