“ I'm not sure what happens when you pass. Truly no one does. That being said on the eve of your burial I am up pacing the floors worried about your dad. He's coping okay, but you know the man he is. He will let this building and building until it overflows. So I'm asking that you watch over him, get him through this sorrow. Because Frankie of all the people on earth you would have been the one to help him through tomorrow.

“ We talked about yesterday. About the chuckle you made to break a silence didn't matter what was going on it made everyone around you smile. We haven't spent time together in years, but I know you didn't change by the way your dad's eyes lit just by saying your name. I know you have had struggles, but I pray you have found peace.
