“ What can be said more about a woman who loved all and saw greatness in everything. She worked hard at family and church. She loved children more than life itself. Always dedicated time to her grandchildren the most. Never forgot a birthday or Christmas. Her memory will never be forgotten. I wish I could be there or even see the funeral. I love you Grammy. More than life itself. I'll see you soon. Your Davey

“ My loving Grandmother...

Even though we weren't very close when I was a young child, it all changed so drastically when she developed her inoperable brain aneurism in 2001.

She moved in with us while she recovered from the unsuccessful surgery. She still had a very hard time remembering since they moved certain things around in her brain.

We got SO incredibly close. She taught me how to crochet, how to make a pumpkin roll, many things I still cherish and enjoy. I would talk to her about her life, and I believe I helped her remember a lot.

After she moved into her own apartment, my mom was still her primary caretaker for many years. Almost every single day after school we'd drop off essentials with her and visit. We laughed, made fun of commercials, watched funny things on TV, just sat together. We had so much fun together. She helped me through my first real heart break. And she always gave me a werther or lifesaver. That was a must. When my mom passed, gram's memory started deteriorating even worse, and eventually she went into the nursing home.

I wish I could have done more. When I started having kids, it got more difficult to visit. But I did. I got there, whenever I could. She loved Tristan and Declan, and gave Tristan his first bite of ice cream.

I was going to bring Isla to meet her after she was born on my gram's birthday, but then the world shut down.

I will always cherish what she taught me. I will always cherish her so very much.

“ Judy had a strong testimony and love of our Savior. She always had questions and was always searching for truth. She loved when she would have the missionaries over and would always make them feel at home. She also loved talking about family and how much she loved each one. Till we meet again mom.
