“ My first encounter with Judy was many years ago. I was dating her Aunt Nancy who eventually became my wife. She and her sister, Deb, would often spend the week-end with their grandparents, and if Nancy and I got back too late from an evening out for me to take the Red Line from Harvard Square to Ashmont in Dorchester, I would sleep on the couch in the sunroom and awaken to two beautiful little faces with their chins on the edge of the couch, waiting. I think they had been threatened if they woke me up. When Judy and Jim were married, I had the honor of escorting her to the altar and to share in the joy of the birth of their Terri. There are endless memories of our lives together, but these are the ones I will carry in my heart.

Love,
Uncle Ralph
