“ So it has been 7 days, still hurts soo much, but I have been thinking about so many things. Marge was every thing to me, a mother, a sister, a friend and in the end my child. Whenever my world got in trouble, it was her I called, her I ran to and she was Always there for me and always fixed me. I have been thanking God over and over again for bringing me home and letting me have the quality time that I shared with her. Since Nov.1 I saw her pretty much every day. I cooked all her favorite foods, I drank beers with her at her kitchen table,we laughed, we cried, and we discussed heavily the woes of the world. A week ago, she took my hand, she looked me in the eye and so seriously said"Ann thank you so much for everything" She knew and she was ready. I am so at peace for her cos she is flying with David, so sad for me cos I know I will never have another like her in my life, but I know she will always watch over me and fix me just as she always did here. Kinda nice to have such a friend in such high places:) Soul mates do not have to be partners, cos I know she truly was mine.

“ Margie and I have been friends since college. Although we didn't see each other often, we were always in touch. She introduced me to classicl music (especially "The Moldau", and encouraged me to write. Both these things have been a huge part of my life ever since. I will always miss her, but a big part of Margie will be64529 with me forever.

“ I will miss you so very much. You were the one constant person in my life, for my entire life. You taught me so much, and helped shape the person I am. Your laughter will resonate forever. My life will never be the same with you gone from it. Thank you for all the years of listening, talking, solving the worlds problems, laughing immoderately and, often, hysterically. I will always remember you. Until we meet again, please watch over all of us. Your loving niece, Whitney

“ I'm saddened to learned that Margie has died. She was an RFS classmate (Class of 55) and remebered for her down-to-earth nature, sense of humor and brilliance as a student. She was a real jewel. I am very sorry for your loss.
