“ Richard was a kind, thoughtful and caring person. Out of the blue with no apparent motivation other than genuine concern and love, Richard would call me about once a year. On no particular day at no particular time, my phone would ring and I'd smile as I read the caller ID. It would probably just pop into his head that we hadn't spoken for some time and that he wanted to know how I was doing. Rather than dismiss the thought and cave in to what could have been more pressing things, he'd just pick up the phone and call. That's the kind of person Richard always was... kind, loving, and genuinely concerned for others. Now he's at rest and in the company of so many other loved ones and I miss him!

“ My most memorable moment was at Plymouth state in the parking lot at Stephs graduation from graduate school. I remember the day like it was yesterday. I asked him to help me grab something from the trunk of my car and he was willing and happy to help as he always was with anything. He is one of the most willing people to want to be involved and help on any project I have ever had. When we got to the car I opened the trunk and showed him an engagement ring. He was speechless and yet so happy. I will never forget that moment and how he stumbled over the word and said absolutely in a way that was so much more than just a yes. He then actually kept it a secret from everyone for over a month until I actually finally proposed to her! Asking him and having that moment with him is something I will never forget. He was so kind and such a loving person to me. He welcomed me with open arms and I am so happy for all the loving memories I have shared with him. I loved his visits and for the genuine happiness he had for all the grandkids as well. Every time he saw them he would light up with happiness and they always loved seeing him.
